

SHADOW

Deep in the jungle where the monkeys yowl,
And fly from bough to bough,
The sun can't figure how to shake the shadow.

You run safari by an ancient lamp.
You will wind up in the dark,
Smackin' rock to spark the lonely shadow.

Oh, oh, years and years of hacking your way through the jungle vines
With drunken monkees shaping shadow creatures through the guiding light,
Making fairy tales of every single thing you think you know,
When all the signs you thought were real, they're only shadow!

Oh, oh, oh, oh, hungry for the light.
Oh, oh, oh, oh, hungry for the light.

Deep in the jungle you may hunt your dream, but
The wolf is on the prowl.
He'll huff and puff and howl you into shadow.
And all the piggies who might root out your dream, well
They won't be on your side.
They scurry off and hide deep down in shadow.

Oh, oh, your dreams are rapidly running out of time
And those crazy monkees cannot help you understand the reason why,
You will not build your house of brick from all the things you think you know,
When all the stones you thought were real, they're only shadow!

Oh, oh, oh, oh, hungry for the light.
Oh, oh, oh, oh, hungry for the light.

I beat my head against a granite wall. I was begging for release.
I wound up dazed and on my knees in shadow.
The old machete, well, I laid it down. When I gave up the fight,
I found a secret light hiding in shadow.

Oh, oh, only shadow eases the heat of a blinding light
And crazy monkees only live in rumblings of a hungry mind.
Come to find letting go of all the things you think you know
Might open up your heart to find you're only shadow

Oh, oh, oh, oh dancing in the light.
Oh, oh, oh, oh dancing in the light.
